

Karen Terio is a clinical professor, veterinary diagnostic laboratory and veterinary clinical medicine at the department of pathobiology at College of Veterinary Medicine, University of Illinois at Urban Champaign, USA and chief of the zoological pathology program. She is an ACVP diplomate with a research interest in diseases, mainly primates and wild felids and their impact on conservation of wild animals. Karen is member of a broad variety of international conservation organization including the Great Ape Heart Project. She is editor of "Pathology of Wildlife and Zoo Animals".